Carter seeks to bind Mideast peace treaty

President Carter, in a fresh effort to salvage Mideast peace prospects, gave Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin new proposals on Sunday.

The proposals were described by an Israeli official as "important and interesting." The contents were kept secret, but Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., told reporters after a meeting with the president that the proposals were in the nature of "pragmatic guarantees" designed to build trust between Egypt and Israel.

"It may be the cement that binds this treaty," Javits said. He refused to provide further details.

Begin referred the proposals to his government in Jerusalem and told Carter he hoped to have a response before he leaves the United States this week.

Meanwhile, a White House statement said Carter would review the situation with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat. And Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., said the two leaders were already in touch.

"I think he's gone the last mile," Percy said of Carter's intensive effort to guide Egypt and Israel to completion of the elusive treaty.

The White House statement, still not providing specific details, termed the proposals "suggestions designed to help resolve some of the outstanding differences between Egypt and Israel."

It was the first positive development since Begin arrived here Thursday. At the time, Begin described the negotiations as in deep crisis.

"The proposals are important because, in our estimation, they are different from previous proposals," said the Israeli official, who asked not to be identified.

Begin had been expected to go to New York Monday evening, and it was not clear whether the developments would cause a change in his plans.

Before Sunday's meeting with Begin, Carter had indicated a failure to break the impasse in negotiations.

Begin, meanwhile, vowed again that Israel would not sign "a sham document.

"I do not adopt the theory of 'now or never,' " Begin said on a nationally televised interview program. "We shall have to negotiate again, and I don't see any tragedy in it."

Ultimately, he said, there would be peace in the Middle East.

Begin made his comments on the ABC television program "Issues and Answers."

Carter volunteered a bleak assessment in a Bible class at the First Baptist Church, several blocks north of the White House.

"We did not make any progress," he said flatly and without elaboration.

In Cairo, U.S. Ambassador Hermann Eilts gave Sadat a report of the negotiations in a one-hour meeting Sunday. Sadat said Egypt would make a decision on Carter's message Monday and "I shall be in a position to tell you lots then."

McKay also commented on a number of other issues.

On RARE II: "We have had as much RARE II as we can afford." McKay said he felt there was enough authority concerning public lands available to the government already and further legislation might completely limit public access.

On SALT II: "We have to keep pursuing SALT to avoid the confrontation of war." He said he wasn't sure whether the government should sign the current draft of the SALT treaty, but said some agreement is necessary.

On the Vietnam-China confrontation: "Any time there is a major confrontation in the world it is our concern, whether we are in it or not." McKay said the situation is dangerous and Americans should be very concerned.

On the 1980 presidential election race: McKay said he felt Carter would be re-elected and he would support him.

Voyager I

Ship nears Jupiter

By ROBERT LOCKE
AP Science Writer

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — With cameras clicking and computers humming, Voyager 1 makes its long-awaited rendezvous with Jupiter today, coming close enough to the distant planet to reveal never-before-seen details as small as five miles in diameter, scientists hope.

The spectacle was billed by National Aeronautics and Space Administration scientists as "one of the most memorable days in planetary exploration."

The unmanned spaceship's exotic itinerary put the closest approach to Jupiter at 4:42 a.m. PST as Voyager, sailing along at about 81,000 miles an hour, passes within 172,750 miles of the planet's swirling cloak of clouds.

The fly-by actually takes place half an hour earlier, but radio signals announcing the encounter need more than 37 minutes to travel the 420 million miles from Jupiter to Earth.

Jupiter, 1,200 times the size of Earth, appears to be mostly a fast-spinning ball of liquid hydrogen and helium with a rocky core and a surface coating of thick clouds. It has no solid surface.

The clouds, which displayed a dazzling array of colors in earlier Voyager photos, are formed into alternating dark and light belts.

After passing Jupiter, the ship, carrying 11 cameras and instruments, will inspect at least three of the planet's 13 moons and search for possible undiscovered satellites.

With the first leg of its oneway journey completed, Voyager 1 will head farther into space for a 20-month cruise to distant Saturn — a golden planet nestled inside brilliant rings.

A sistership is trailing Voyager 1. Voyager 2, some 50 million miles behind, is due at Jupiter in July and at Saturn in 1981. NASA says it may send Voyager 2 on to Uranus, a faraway world never visited by man's machines.

Both Voyagers will one day leave the solar system and drift endlessly through space. Each ship contains a phonograph of Earth sounds — from music and bird songs to a message from President Carter. The recordings were included in case the Voyagers are found by inhabitants of another world.

The Voyagers are following a trail blazed by two earlier American spacecraft. Pioneer 10 and 11 reconnoitered Jupiter in 1973 and 1974. Pioneer 11 will be Earth's first emissary to Saturn this September.

Voyager project manager Robert J. Parks said the spacecraft and its instruments are functioning well as Voyager closes on Jupiter.

But he told a news conference at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory that weather problems on Earth caused the loss of more than three hours of data and pictures being relayed from the ship Saturday.

He said a heavy thunderstorm that settled over a tracking station in Australia had blocked the incoming signals. Parks said steps have been taken to ensure similar problems won't endanger this morning's dramatic observations.

Edward C. Stone, project scientist for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration mission, said the Voyager's television cameras should "reveal more and more of these beautiful details ... as we get very close to Jupiter."

As the pictures improve, Stone said, more suprises are probably in store and that's what Voyager is all about.

"It's the difference between what we expect and what we actually see that becomes the new information we gain," the scientist said.

Of particular interest are the hot spots, which are apparently windows into Jupiter's atmosphere. Voyager's instruments will try to peer through those windows and find out what's inside.

That's important, Stone said, because scientists think Jupiter's atmosphere may not have changed too drastically since the solar system was formed.

Prominent economist to be forum speaker

Dr. Thomas Sowell, professor of economics at UCLA and one of the nation's leading experts on the economics of blacks in America, will speak at the forum assembly at 10 a.m. Tuesday in the Marriott Center.

The address will be broadcast live on KBYU-FM and repeated at 9 p.m. Sunday.

Sowell has a wide variety of experience in economics, ranging from university professor at several major universities to economic analyst for American Telephone & Telegraph Company.

He earned a B.A. degree at Harvard in 1958, an M.A. at Columbia University in 1959 and a Ph.D. in economics at the University of Chicago in 1968.

He worked as a labor economist for the U.S. Department of Labor for 15 months before his appointment as an economics instructor at Rutgers in 1962. He has also taught at Howard, Cornell, Amherst and Brandeis universities.

Sowell taught at UCLA before becoming project director for the Urban Institute. He returned to UCLA, and was then named a fellow at the Center for Advanced Study in the Behavioral Sciences. He was also appointed a senior fellow at the Hoover Institution.

His latest book is "American Ethnic Groups" and another will soon be published. Other books by him are "Race and Economics," "Classical Economics Reconsidered," "Say's Law: An Historical Analysis," "Black Education: Myths and Tragedies" and "Economics: Analysis and Issues."

Y elders' assignment involves 24-hour duty

By PAMELA MARTIN
Universe Staff Writer

"Every member a missionary" may be true, but for BYU's own elders, it's "every minute a missionary."

"We're on 24-hour call like the old country doctor," said Charles N. Frakes, one of the four elders assigned to BYU from the Utah-Salt Lake City Mission for the LDS Church.

The other three, Hal R. Winters, Jeffrey Larnerd, and James Windell, have been here less than three months and agreed it is a busy schedule in the number one English-speaking mission in the world.

Between discussions, referrals, baptisms, and district and zone meetings, the elders stay occupied. They teach about six discussions a day, receive 20 referrals per companionship every month and baptize 25 persons monthly.

However, the elders said, time must also be found to attend devotionals, forums, sports events and concerts where they hand out and pick up referral cards, greet people and answer questions.

BYU is a different kind of mission field and the elders say they are enjoying it. Elder Winters, a native of Calgary, Alberta, Canada, said, "I appreciate the campus mainly because of the great amount of work involved here. There are just so many teaching situations we're involved in. We see more teaching and more converts to the church here."

Elder Frakes, of Douglass, Kan., commenting on the number of returned missionaries attending school, said, "Here we have each person involved in fellowshipping and friendshipping non-Mormons. It's a very good atmosphere — the best college in the U.S."

"What I like," said Elder Larnerd, from Newark Valley, N. Y., "is the spirit that is here. It's magnified with all the students and teachers so involved in the church," he said. "That spirit touches the hearts and lives of people who come here and helps them have a desire to believe even before we start teaching them."

"Here," he said, "the fellowshipping and friendshipping works like it's suppose to."

Elder Windell, of El Paso, Texas, said he likes being among people his age and believes "if you work for it, you can have a choice experience here every day."

U.S. fears Japan's trade surplus

TOKYO (AP) — America fears Japan's trade surpluses may become permanent, keeping the world economy in turmoil, a senior U.S. official said Sunday after Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal met with Japanese officials.

"It's a very serious situation and we hope they will be aware of it and do something about it," said the official, who asked not to be identified.

Japan had a surplus in its trade with the United States last year of about $12 billion, nearly half of the total U.S. trade deficit. That deficit is listed by Washington as a major cause of America's inflation and the decline of the dollar.

Russia conducts national vote

MOSCOW (AP) — President Leonid I. Brezhnev and two cosmonauts casting ballots from outer space joined more than 100 million Soviets in voting Sunday for the national parliament.

They all had a simple choice of "Yes" or "No" for the Communist Party's single candidate for each of the 1,500 seats in the Supreme Soviet.

Asked when he expected a strategic arms limitation treaty to be signed with the United States, Brezhnev said, "When the documents have been prepared by Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and our minister, then we'll go and sign."

Missionary dies after accident

A Mormon missionary who was the son of the adjutant general of the Utah National Guard died Saturday of head injuries he received when he fell from the back of a truck.

Elder Cory Watts, 19, Salt Lake City, son of Gen. and Mrs. Maurice L. Watts, died in an Anaheim hospital where he had been in a coma since the accident Feb. 24.

A church spokesman said Watts and a companion were moving their belongings from one apartment to another in a truck. A bicycle belonging to Watts began to roll off the back of the vehicle and the youth leaped to grab it.

He fell from the moving truck and landed on his head.

Explorers exit safely from cave

LAFAYETTE, Ga. (AP) — Seven college explorers were rescued from a cave late Sunday after being trapped by floodwaters for more than 24 hours.

The seven, two women and five men from Georgia Southwestern College, walked out of the cave in Pigeon Mountain with help from rescuers, witnesses said.

The party, including an assistant professor who led the group, entered the cave about 11 a.m. Saturday, and were trapped when heavy rain blocked off a passageway about six hours later.

Two other members of the party escaped just before rising water blocked the 2-foot-high passageway about 100 feet beneath the surface of the mountain in northwest Georgia.

Jury selected in plutonium suit

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Jury selection begins today in the trial of an $11.5 million lawsuit alleging that nuclear worker Karen Silkwood was contaminated with plutonium as a result of negligence by the Kerr-McGee Corp.

The case has drawn national attention and Ms. Silkwood, who was killed in a car wreck in 1974, has become somewhat of a martyr to some opponents of nuclear power.

Relatives of Ms. Silkwood, who was 28 when she died, filed the lawsuit in U.S. District Court.

The lawyers say that since Ms. Silkwood was active in the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union, the plutonium contamination of her apartment may have been caused intentionally by Kerr-McGee. The company has repeatedly denied the allegation.

The young woman was an employee at the now closed Kerr-McGee nuclear fuel rod manufacturing facility near Crescent at the time of her death. The rods are used in nuclear reactors.

Ms. Silkwood was killed in a one-vehicle car wreck on Nov. 13, 1974. At the time of the wreck, she was reportedly en route to meet a New York Times reporter to discuss alleged safety problems at the Kerr-McGee nuclear plant.

Lie-detector tests reveal Dummar told truth in case

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Melvin Dummar, Utah beer truck driver named in billionaire Howard Hughes's "Mormon will," has passed a lie-detector test, and his lawyers are investigating new leads in the case, a Salt Lake City television station reported Saturday.

A Las Vegas jury declared the document a fraud nine months ago.

Dummar admitted leaving the will at LDS Church headquarters in Salt Lake City after his thumbprint was found on the envelope, but he said it was given to him by a man who left it at the Willard, Utah, service station Dummar operated at the time.

KSL Television reported on its "Dimension 5" program Saturday that Dummar had no involvement in the writing of the handwritten will and does not know how it was written, based on lie-detector tests conducted at the University of Utah.

Dr. David Raskin, who conducted the test for Dummar's lawyers, said if the test had been taken last year, it might have had an impact on the Mormon will trial. He said the chances are only 1 in 100 that Dummar lied.

Raskin said Dummar was also telling the truth when he said he picked up a man in the desert in 1968 whom he thought to be Howard Hughes.

Dummar was named a one-sixteenth beneficiary in the will.

KSL reporter Lynn Packer said the station proposed the lie detector test, but the lawyers wanted an agreement that only positive results would be released. When the station refused, the lawyers asked Raskin to conduct the test for them, Packer said.

The station also reported Dummar's lawyers have hired an investigator to look into allegations, including one of jury tampering.

Jury foreman Richard Wright said on the program that he had been questioned by a reporter about allegations he received $37,000 to be divided among him and four other jurors. Wright said there were also allegations that his gambling debts were paid off.

He said none of the allegations were true.

Wright said he was also told there was a break-in at a Las Vegas attorney's office during which documents related to the Mormon will case were stolen.

Police terminate strike without union agreement

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Strike-weary police made one last angry gesture, then pulled down picket lines and trickled back to work without a union contract Sunday, ending a 16-day-old strike that hampered Mardi Gras festivities.

Mayor Ernest Morial said Sunday that the angry gesture — Saturday night's rejection of the city's final contract offer — cost the striking policemen recognition of their union by the city and the blanket amnesty they had asked for patrolmen who stayed on the picket lines.

"Right now, we're not recognizing anybody," Morial said in response to questions about the status of the Teamsters-affiliated Policemen's Association of Louisiana.

He said, however, that the city will stand by its offer of increased insurance benefits and uniform allowances and its promise to develop a new formula for computing overtime — a package which he said will cost the city $2.5 million a year.

Morial said any policeman who had not returned to work before Saturday night's vote on the contract will be considered subject to discipline — on a case-by-case basis.

"We assured all participants in the strike that they would not be subjected to disciplinary action because of their participation in the strike," the mayor said. "We will stand by this commitment of blanket amnesty for all police officers who returned to work prior to last night's rejection vote."

But he said the city will prosecute any officer found guilty of strike-related vandalism and will take action against those who harassed non-striking policemen.

Even Vincent Bruno, president of the policemen's association, called in Sunday morning to ask for reassignment, said Lt. Frank Hayward, police information officer and Bruno's direct superior.

Bruno said Sunday morning that two weeks without a pay check and the prospects of an even longer period on the picket line had discouraged the men.

Families and drama to be lecture topic

Conflict and compassion in the family as seen through the eyes of the dramatist will be discussed Tuesday in the third annual P.A. Christensen lecture at BYU.

Jean Anne Waterstradt, associate professor of English, will deliver the 1979 lecture at 7:30 p.m. in 184 JKB. The lecture series is sponsored by the College of Humanities and is open to the public.

"Family relationships have provided the structure for dramatists from ancient Greece to modern America," said Professor Waterstradt. "Within its bounds are fostered all basic human relationships. Every strength and goodness and also every weakness and evil of which human beings are capable originate within the family."

Professor Waterstradt is the senior active member of the English faculty. She is a graduate of BYU, Weber State College, and the University of Southern California. She has also studied at the University of Utah, the University of Kansas and Columbia University.

STEP UP TO EXCELLENCE IN PROGRAMMABILITY. STEP UP TO HEWLETT-PACKARD.

Whether you're just starting out, or well into advanced programming, a step up to proven Hewlett-Packard programmability is the logical choice.

Hewlett-Packard pioneered the world's first handheld programmable calculators. Since then, HP quality, performance and ease-of-use have continued to set the standard of excellence. If you demand excellence from yourself, you deserve an HP programmable.

EXCELLENCE BY DESIGN.

Every feature of an HP programmable is there to help you work faster and easier:

RPN logic. For simplicity and control in solving both long and short calculations, RPN logic excels. That's why all HP programmables use it.

Ease-of-use. HP programmables use just one line of memory for one, two, three or four keystrokes -- effectively doubling or tripling memory capacity.

Continuous Memory. Use one or more programs frequently? An HP with Continuous Memory will save you time and trouble by saving programs and data when it's switched off.

"Smart" card reader. Only HP has it. Saves you time, trouble and confusion. Lets you load all or part of a program in any order. And load data from all or selected registers back onto a card for reference.

AN HP PROGRAMMABLE FOR EVERY NEED.

From basic science to advanced finance, HP has a programmable for you:

HP-33E. Scientific. 48 li... of memory. 8 addressable registers.

HP-38E. Advanced Financial. Up to 99 lines of memory. ... addressable registers.

Swimcats win WAC

By GORDON MONSON
Universe Sports Writer

BYU's Swimcats overpowered the field at the WAC swimming championships in Laramie, Wyo. this weekend, bringing home their first WAC swimming title since 1974.

The Cougars actually won the meet Friday when they pulled away from Utah and Wyoming by taking first in two events and adding up points on second and third places.

BYU was followed in its 502 point victory by the University of Utah with 465 points, Wyoming 402, New Mexico 183, Colorado State 131 and San Diego State 121.

In the final day of competition BYU won three championships. John Sorich won the 1,650 yard freestyle in 16:14.95, Piero Perrcuti won the 200 yard breaststroke in 2:08.86, and Corey Killpack won the 200 yard butterfly with a time of 1:50.08.

Freshman Killpack won three first places overall in the meet, and was the only Cougar to win three events. His time in the 200 Individual Medley, 1:55.26, set a new school record, surpassing Bruce Bowlsby's 1977 mark of 1:56.22.

BYU coach Tim Powers said of Killpack, "Corey is a gifted athlete who has worked hard all year. He is a strong All-America candidate."

Another triple winner in the championships was Mike Hayes of Utah. Hayes was named the meet's outstanding swimmer. He won the 50, 100, and 200 freestyles and anchored two winning relays for the Utes.

Double winners in the 17th Annual WAC swimming championships were BYU's Sorich and Utah diver Doug McGregor. Sorich won the 500 freestyle along with Saturday's 1,650 yard freestyle win, while McGregor took the one and three meter diving. Sorich's time in the 1,650 freestyle set a new Wyoming pool record.

Senior Lance Gordon set a new WAC meet record, 20.63, in the preliminaries of the 50 yard freestyle and the time also set a new school record and qualified him for the NCAA finals on Mar. 22-24 in Cleveland, Ohio.

Gordon's time beat his old mark of 20.756 which he set in the WAC finals at Provo last year. He finished third in the finals when he got off to a slow start at the block.

Powers was pleased with his team's efforts and felt the victory was a total team effort. "It's taken us a long time to build up to this and it's a gratifying feeling," he said.

Doubles sweep paces Y netters past Utah

Following a three-three deadlock in singles play, the BYU netters swept the doubles matches which secured a 6-3 victory over their in-state rivals, Utah.

Despite the score, BYU's win, the second over Utah this year, was harder than it looked. Early in the contest the Utes jumped to a 3-1 lead in singles play before the Cougars were able to tie the match at three apiece.

In singles action, it took BYU's Tony Trear three sets to put away Drew Sweet. Trear won the opening set 6-3, then lost 6-7 and won the third set 6-4.

"Sweet has the perfect game to beat me," Trear said, and Sweet did beat him 7-6, 6-4, when last they met. "I served well and just played better this time," Trear noted.

Mike Tammen posted the easiest win for the Cougars in single play as he defeated Daryl Weiner 6-1, 6-3. Cougar Rick Fought posted BYU's other singles win as he had to come from behind to defeat Chris Spackman, 2-6, 6-1, 6-4."It was a really gutty match," Fought said shortly after his victory. "The key to the match was the fact that we were mentally tougher," BYU assistant coach Larry Hall said. "Utah got ahead 3-1 in singles matches and the momentum seemed to be with them. We were playing tight, but made an excellent comeback."

In doubles play, the team of Fought and Trear posted BYU's best win sweeping Weiner and Jeff Wenzel in straight sets, 6-4, 6-4.

But the story for Eric Peterson and Tammen was different, as the Cougar pair came from behind in the tie breaker of the final set to win 6-4, 4-6, 7-6. With the score 4-2 Utah in the tie breaker, the Ute duo of Derk Wharton and Drew Sweet needed a point to win, but BYU rallied to tie the score at 4 apiece and took the tie breaker for a 7-6 set score.

BYU's Tina Gunn muscles a shot between two defenders during weekend action in the Smith fieldhouse. Gunn paced the Cougar scoring attack, finishing the Northern Colorado game with 30 points.

Women cagers earn championship

By CHUCK GATES
Universe Sports Writer

It'll be written in the record books as a conference co-championship, but to coach Courtney Leishman the championship part is the only thing that counts.

"It doesn't matter if it's tri, bi or quad, it's still a championship," an elated Leishman remarked following his team's championship victory over Northern Colorado in Saturday's women's basketball action on the Smith Fieldhouse court.

The victory, BYU's second of the weekend, came on the heels of a critical 99-82 triumph over Colorado on Friday and guaranteed the Cougars a share of the conference crown with Utah.

Colorado could have locked up the league title with double wins over the weekend or at least gained a share of the championship with a split. But losses to Utah and BYU dropped the Buffaloes'into a tie for third place in the league with a 10-3 mark. Weber State entered weekend play tied with Utah and BYU with a 9-2 league mark, but dropped out of the contention by losing.

This means both BYU and Utah end up conference play tied for first place at 11-2. However, the Cougars, by virtue of their win over the Utes earlier in the regular season, will be the first place representative in the conference tournament at Tuscon's Pima College next weekend. Utah will be the second place team in the four-team tourney.

Colorado

Against what Leishman called a surprisingly physical and strong Colorado team, BYU turned to some hot shooting, hitting on an outstanding 62 percent of their field goal attempts to earn the win.

The Buffaloes were expecting to deal with Tina Gunn and they were right. Gunn played another solid game, scoring a game high of 25 points and grabbing nine rebounds. What Colorado wasn't expecting was Rosemary Jensen. Jensen, hitting just about everything she threw up, peppered the Buffalo defense with 14 first half points for the Cougars en route to a 21 point game.

Jackie Beene and Jeanette Weston were both in double figures for BYU. Beene scored 15 points, 10 of those in the first half, and Weston 14 points.

Commenting on Jensen's play, Leishman said her play was like that of last season when she starred on BYU's conference championship team as a freshman.

The first half of play was close. Only one point separated the two teams with just over four-minutes left to be played at 40-39 in favor of the Cougars. BYU went on a 12-6 scoring attack to take a 52-45 halftime advantage.

The second half belonged to Gunn and the Cougars. At the 14:35 mark, Gunn scored from inside to increase the BYU lead to 68-56. That advantage held up until Gunn hit for six straight points to widen the lead to 78-64 with 9:16 left. Both teams exchanged buckets the rest of the way, BYU's 99-80 advantage being the largest of the contest.

Colorado's Sandy Bean topped her team with 15 points. In addition to Bean, five other Buffaloes hit in double figures in a balanced scoring attack.

Northern Colorado

After Saturday's victory, Leishman said he had been concerned that his team "wasn't mentally prepared" following its win over Colorado the night before.

Ready or not the Cougars came out and taught Northern Colorado a lesson or two about basketball and just as the day before, Gunn and Jensen took control of the classroom, putting on a shooting exhibition the first ten-minutes of the game which accounted for 28 of the Cougars first 30 points.

The game was never in doubt and BYU gradually built upon their first half lead. The Cougars lead 14-6 with 15:15 left to play in the half, 26-12 with 11:36 to be played, and 32-16 at the 9:28 mark. At the half, BYU owned a 53-30 advantage as they entered the locker room.

A six-minute Northern Colorado scoring draught beginning at the 13:59 increased the Cougar lead to 39 points at 79-40. BYU continued to build upon that advantage, the final score being the largest difference of the afternoon.

Gunn again was the game's high scorer with 30 points. Four other Cougars joined her in double figures. Jensen totaled 14 points, Jenny Cox scored 12 points and Weston added 10 points.

Northern Colorado's Lou Peil was tops on her team with 12 points before fouling out of the game. Cristal McGill and Susan Rupp both added 10 points each.

Cougar baseball team wins, loses, ties on road

The Cougars' four-game baseball series against the University of New Mexico was marked by strange events, solid pitching and good base running, according to Cougar coach Gary Pullins.

The Cougars won a game, tied a game and split two in the non-league series played Friday and Saturday.

The Cougars took the first game 5-0, with Bert Hadley on the mound for the win. Len Nahako paced the BYU attack, going 3 for 4. Nahako's finesse at the plate led him to a new Cougar record, as the Lobos feared his bat so much they walked him four times in the third game.

The second game was a 10-10 tie under unusual circumstances. Knotted with an even score in the last inning, it became necessary to extend the game. The Cougars pulled ahead in the extra inning, but darkness fell, and the officials decided to disregard the Cougar lead and call the game a tie.

The third game also took an interesting turn. The Cougars were ahead 5-3 in the ninth inning. With bases loaded, third baseman Murphy Sua fielded the ball to Ken Clayton at first for what looked like an out, Pullins said, but the umpire tripped and said he didn't see the play to make the call. The Lobos then tied the score and came out on top 6-5 after 12 innings of play.

Cougar shortstop Cliff Pastornicky was the offensive standout in that game and in the series. Pastornicky went five for six in the third, and eight for fifteen in his series total.

The Cougars succumbed to the pitching of veteran Lobo Rob Hoover in the final game, losing 1-3. Hoover held the Cougars scoreless until the eighth inning, when second baseman Mike Render's hit drove in first baseman Rich Thorn.

Commenting on the series, Pullins said, "Our pitching staff is really starting to come into its own."

He cited Bradley, Rob Blyth, Tom Morris and Greg Peterson for their hurling efforts. Pullins was also pleased with the Cougar base running, as they stole nine bases in the series, attempting steals "even when we were behind because we were so sure we could get the extra bases."

Zambrzycki sets indoor track record

Chemis Zambrzycki captured the American indoor record in the pentathlon as she led the Cougar women's track team to an eighth place finish at the 1979 Missouri National Track and Field Invitational Saturday.

Zambrzycki, who set a personal best with 4,358 points, also set a University of Missouri Hernes Center record in the long jump competition of the pentathlon, leaping 19-3. Zambrzycki's jump was a little shy of her personal best of 20-4.

Pentathlon teammate Julian Estes also performed well in the Missouri meet, scoring a fourth place finish with a personal best of 3,725 points.

Lady netters ice Minnesota

An emphatic "Wow," was the first comment Minnesota Coach Ellie Peden made when asked her opinion of BYU's women's tennis team.

Peden made the comment during a match Saturday while BYU was shutting her team out on Cougar courts, 9-0.

"The girls are all business when they're on the court," Cougar Coach Ann Valentine of her victorious squad. "They don't ease up according to their competition."

The Cougars were all business in Saturday's competition, as they won each match in two straight sets. At numbers one and two singles, Maria Rothschild and Charlene Murphy breezed through Patty Moran, 6-2, 6-0; and Mey Horan, 6-1, 6-0, respectively.

Playing number three singles, Tracy Tanner downed Marnie Whaton, 6-1, 6-3. In the number 4 spot, Cougar Lani Wilcox went through Janelle Johnson, 6-1, 6-4.

BYU's Barbara Barnes, playing with a strained achilles tendon, managed to finish off Leslie Larm, 6-2, 6-3, and to complete the Cougar singles sweep, Lori Barlow defeated Peggy Chutich, 6-3, 6-1.

The Cougars meted out more Minnesota punishment in the doubles, when Tanner and Rothschild teamed up to beat Moran and Chutich, 6-0, 6-2, for the number one doubles title. In the second spot, Murphy and Barnes tallied 7-5, 6-0 scores against Haran and Whaton, then BYU's Wilcox and Barlow completed the sweep by downing Kari Sandvig and Larm, 6-2, 6-0.

Peden said her team's trip west was worth it, despite the route. "We were overmatched," she said. "But we jump at the chance to play the top teams in the nation."

The Cougars staged their killing without the aid of Wendy Barlow, who usually plays in one of BYU's top three seeds. Barlow was still in Dallas Saturday, playing in the Avon Futures Circuit where she teamed up with South Africa's Lana Kloss to lose to Martina Navritalova and Ann Smith, 6-1, 6-1.

Pres. Benson outlines areas of preparation in following the Savior

By Joseph Walker
Universe Staff Writer

President Ezra Taft Benson of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles of the LDS Church encouraged a Marriott Center crowd of 18,000 to "Rise up, oh youth of Zion."

Speaking at the monthly BYU 14-Stake Fireside, Benson said "Every previous gospel dispensation has drifted into apostasy, but ours will not. The Kingdom of God will remain intact to welcome the return of its head, even Jesus Christ."

Benson said there will be great battles between the forces of good and evil in our day "but the final outcome is certain. The forces of righteousness will finally win. What remains to be seen is where each of us personally, now and in the future, will stand in this fight and how tall we will stand."

In order to be found on the Lord's side in these great battles, Benson said we need to pattern our lives after the Savior in four areas of personal preparation. He then quoted from Luke 2:52, which says "And Jesus increased in wisdom, in stature, and in favor with God and man."

"If we are to follow in his footsteps," Benson said, " we also should increase in these same four areas in which he increased."

In the first area, that of "increasing in wisdom," Benson said "The most vital knowledge you can learn is the saving truths of the Gospel. The most vital words you can read are the words of the president of the church, particularly the living prophet. There is much reading material available that is either time wasting or corrupting. Don't allow your mind to become the dumping ground for someone else's garbage."

"Increasing in stature," or progressing physically, is intimately connected with spiritual progression, Benson said. Maintaining righteousness, proper diet, regular exercise and good sleeping habits all are important in following the Savior in this area.

In order to "grow in favor with God," Benson, who has been an apostle for 36 years, said we must "keep our channels clear of sin, so that we may know that we have received inspiration in the battle, and not 'sin'-spiration."

President Ezra Taft Benson of the Quorum of the Twelve hugs his 11-year-old great niece, Jenae Peterson of Provo, following Sunday's 14-stake fireside.

"Practices that would increase our favor with God would include scripture study, personal prayer, service to our Father's children — to the family, the church and the country — and following the Lord's timetable in our lives — a mission, then marriage, then education," he said.

The final area of preparation, or "growing in favor with man," can best be accomplished by discovering your faith, your spouse and your life's work, Benson said.

"The heavenly grandstands are cheering," Benson said, "and we are fast approaching the end of the game. The Lord will win — this we know. But each of us personally must decide whether or not we will be a part of the winning team. We can be a part of it if we will but follow the Savior's perfect example to increase in wisdom, in stature, and in favor with God and with man."

Major religious writings to be symposium topic

By DIANNA GREER
Universe Staff Writer

The Center for International and Area Studies will present a symposium entitled, "The Literature of Belief: The Expression of the Religious Experience in Sacred Texts" Wednesday and Thursday.

"A number of important scholars and commentators from throughout the world will discuss some of the major writings of world religions including important Mormon texts," said Neal Lambert, symposium coordinator.

Lambert said the symposium will be presented in acknowledgement of LDS President Spencer W. Kimball's injunction to become better prepared in understanding of the lands and peoples of the world.

Joseph Campbell of Sarah Lawrence College, will begin the program Wednesday with a keynote address at 10 a.m. in the Varsity Theater, ELWC. His subject is the "Masks of Oriental Gods: Symbolism of Kundalini Yoga."

Judaeo-Christian Scripture will be the theme for Wednesday's 1 p.m. session in the Varsity Theater. Herbert N. Schneidau, of the University of California at Santa Barbara will speak on "Interrelationships Between the Literary Motive and the Expression of Belief: An Examination of the Old Testament."

He will be followed by Richard L. Anderson, professor of Ancient Scripture at BYU who will discuss "Types of Christian Revelation."

There will be an informal reception at 7 p.m. in 347 ELWC. Guests will be present to meet and get acquainted with faculty, students and other participants.

Mormon Scripture will be discussed in the 8:15 p.m. session in 205 JRCB with Adele McCollum of Montclair State College, Montclair, N.J., speaking on "The First Vision: Re-Visioning Historical Experience."

"The Articles of Faith: Language of Confession in Mormon Belief" is the topic of Steven P. Sondrup, professor of Humanities and Comparative Literature at BYU.

Thursday's lectures begin with the Religious Literature of India and the Near East at 10 a.m. in the Alice L. Reynolds Room, HBLL.

P. Lal, director of Writer's Workshop, Calcutta, India, will speak on the subject of "The Hindu Experience: An Examination of Folklore and Sacred Texts."

He will be followed by Fazlur Rahman of the University of Chicago who will speak on "Elements of Belief in the Qu'ran."

At 1 p.m. in the same location Religious Literature of East Asia will be discussed. Richard B. Mather, University of California, Berkley, will address the subject: "The Impact of Buddhist Ideas: A Case Study." The second lecture by Wing-tsit Chan of Chatham College will be on "Influences of Taoist Classics on Chinese Philosophy."

"The program will be interesting and challenging," Lambert said. "All students and faculty members are invited to attend any or all of the sessions."

'Battlestar' producer to address Y students

Glen Larson, executive producer of ABC-TV's "Battlestar Galactica," will speak Tuesday in a keynote speech for BYU's Communications Week.

The address will be given at 4 p.m. in the Ballroom, ELWC. Larson's presentation is the first in a series of activities scheduled for Communications Week.

Wednesday at noon, Charles Graves, director of the LDS Church Public Communications Office in New York City, will addresss a luncheon gathering of alumni, faculty, special guests and friends, according to Owen S. Rich, of the communications department. The luncheon will be in 394 ELWC.

Thomas Bolger, chairman of the TV Board of the National Association of Broadcasters and president of WMTV in Milwaukee, Wisc., will speak Wednesday at 4 p.m. in 245 ELWC.

Beginning at 5 p.m. Wednesday Larry Grossman, president of Public Broadcasting Service, will address scholarship donors, special guests and alumni in 394 ELWC.

Mrs. Gertrude Crain, chairman of Crain Communications, will be the speaker for the awards night program Wednesday at 7 p.m. in 1110 SFLC. She will receive a Meritorious Service Award on behalf of "Advertising Age" for its contribution to the improvement of television programming.

A panel of guests will discuss "Mormons and the Media" Thursday at 4 p.m. Panelists will include William Burch, president of Universal Commercial Industrial Films; Arch Madsen, president of Bonneville International; and Art Mortensen, executive vice president of KHSO-TV Las Vegas.

Clothing and textiles contest entries due

The Clothing and Textile College invites all students to submit articles they have made since last April to be considered for display in the Mormon Art Festival, March 15 to April 15.

Categories to be considered are quilt tops, weaving projects, children's clothing and apparel. The apparel projects include dressy and tailored dresses, coats and suits in both half-scale and full size. Apparel entries are to be original or demonstrate a creative use of a commercial pattern.

Entries must be turned in to the Clothing and Textile department, 3256 SFLC, by March 7 in order to be considered for display. Faculty members will judge the articles and choose those to be exhibited in the glass cases in the Smith Family Living Center.

Further information is available by contacting the Clothing and Textile department, ext. 3943.

Piano-tuning big job at BYU

Merrill Cox tunes one of the many pianos in the Harris Fine Arts Center. Cox is one of two full-time workers whose job it is to keep keyboard instruments at BYU in tune.

By MARCI JUDD
Universe Staff Writer

Entertainment The Daily Universe

Two former music majors who "chummed around" as freshmen at BYU several years ago are together again in the music department, doing what they do best.

Merrill Cox and Jack Reeves make their rounds tuning, adjusting and regulating nearly 400 musical instruments found on the BYU campus, including 385 pianos, eight pipe organs and four harpsichords.

When Cox and Reeves met as freshmen 12 years ago they were headed in different directions with their music careers, but after some "arm-twisting" on the part of Cox, Reeves decided on a slight change in his plans.

"I had already graduated in accounting," said Reeves, "and decided to go back to school for a degree in music. I accidentally sat down next to Merrill in class one day, and before long he had me convinced that piano technology was the way to go."

After both had completed the two-year piano technology program, Cox remained at BYU as an assistant piano and organ technician while Reeves made a living as a self-employed piano tuner and guitar instructor.

More coaxing by Cox brought Reeves back to BYU last September with the retirement of a former technician. Says Reeves, "The prospect of working with Merrill was very inviting, and something I couldn't pass up."

The two keep up a very rigorous schedule, one that at times seems near impossible. Most of the pianos in the HFAC practice rooms are played at least 15 hours a day, which necessitates regular tuning - at least twice a year.

"We could each spend 16 hours a day here and never be caught up," said Cox. "But I really enjoy what I do, at least for the first eight or ten hours a day."

Reeves compares tuning pianos to working on automobiles. "When we tune pianos, it's like giving a car a 'lube' and a fill-up. And when we regulate a piano, it's comparable to getting a tune-up."

Besides working for BYU, both Reeves and Cox tune pianos for other people, "as a matter of economic necessity." Reeves boasts a family of seven children, and of Cox's 15 children, 10 are presently living at home.

A second reason for spending their "spare" time tuning pianos, is the people they are able to meet. "It seems like some of the nicest people anywhere own pianos," said Cox.

Reeves says he's not sure whether his children are musically inclined or not but regardless, he's "inclining them."

Cox admits some of his are "inclined," and he counts among them several piano players, a violin player and "one that plays the TV very well."

● Many converts at Y

Saying that there's nothing they dislike about the campus, Elder Frakes jokingly asked, "What can you say about perfection?"

The university has provided some "memorable experiences" for the foursome. Companions Frakes and Winters related just one "of the many" they've encountered.

Elder Winters told of the time, after one of the devotionals at the Marriott Center, he encountered a "shy, young redhead" who, he said, "was looking over the pamphlets as if she knew exactly what she wanted." After talking with her, he discovered she was new in Provo, trying to find an apartment and was interested in the church, which she termed "intriguing." Her interest was "very sincere," he said.

They are now, he said, helping her find a place to stay because, he emphasized, "We're a service agency for all people." And, he added, "Our real joy comes from helping and teaching others in everyday experiences like this."

Elders Larnerd and Windell recalled some of their special times.

One young lady from Mississippi, related Elder Larnerd, came here as a student and contacted them through her roommates. Talking with her, he found she had been interested in the church for several years, but feared to investigate because of her parents. "But here," Larnerd explains, "she was free to make up her own mind and make her own decisions." Then, even before they had an opening prayer or began the discussion, "she indicated her desire to join." She was baptized in January.

Elder Windell recalled Pete, a car salesman in New York who loved his work and his home there. Yet, for some reason, he had a desire to "come out West." He came first to Provo for one day but "didn't like Utah" and so moved on to New Mexico. "But," said Elder Windell, "something kept telling Pete to 'come back to Utah, come back to Utah.' " Succumbing to the urge, Pete returned here where the elders reached him and began discussions.

"I saw his conversion come," Elder Windell related, "When he sat and literally cried with the rest of us as we and his roommates bore testimony of the gospel." Soon after, he was baptized.

The elders said they value this time in their lives, but in the future...?

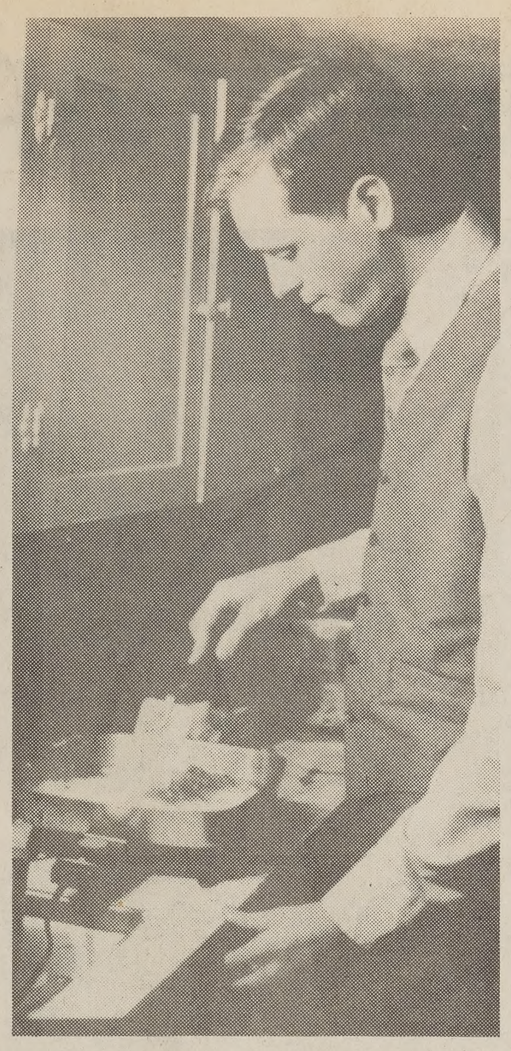
"I plan to get my commercial pilot's license," said Elder Winters. He has already taken private lessons and is half-way to that goal now. He also likes mechanics and does that in his spare time at home.

Elder Frakes, who wants to go into commercial and industrial real estate, wants to visit or live in the Orient, which he said, "fascinates" him. He also practices the martial arts and enjoys the outdoors.

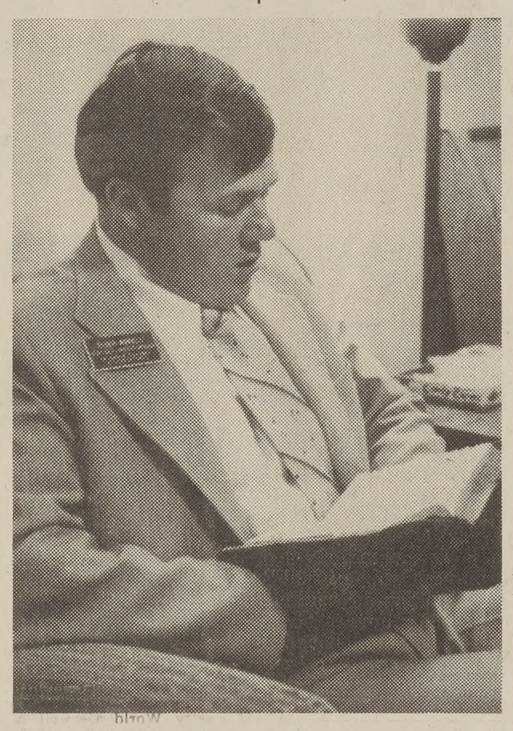
Elder Larnerd is still undecided as to a career, but says he likes playing guitar and tying fishing flies.

A football fan, Elder Windell, a certified welder, wants to get his degree in metallurgy.

Three of the four say they will return to BYU as students. "After this experience as a missionary, feeling the spirit here," said Elder Winters, "I'd really feel bad if I didn't come back to partake of it again in a different way."



Elder Jeffrey Larnerd of Newark Valley, N. Y., starts the day by fixing a Eastern-style bacon-and-eggs breakfast in his Provo apartment.



Reading and pondering the scriptures highlights the day for Elder James Windell of El Paso, Texas.

Advice given on financial security

Only two percent of people who reach age 65 are financially independent.

Twenty-three percent must continue to work and 75 percent are dependent on the aid of family, friends or charity, said Venita VanCaspel, a financial adviser and author.

Ms. VanCaspel spoke in the Varsity Theater Friday as part of the joint regional conference of the International Association of Financial Planners.

There are three financial periods of life, Ms. VanCaspel said. The first period is the first 25 years of life when a vocation is learned. The second period, from age 25 to 65, is the earning period. In this phase, a person applies what he learned in the first period. The decisions made in this second phase determine what will happen in the third period, after age 65, she said.

Ms. VanCaspel gave five reasons why people fail to become financially independent — procrastination, failure to establish goals, ignorance the part money plays in accomplishing that goal, failure to understand and apply tax laws and owning the wrong type of life insurance.

She said everyone should have some money in a guaranteed, idle position and then make investments. Those who are just beginning to invest need to have a "systematic investment program done by the month," even if it is only a few dollars a month, she said.

"If you save $10 a month from age 25 to 65 and average 12 percent on your money, you will have $100,000 by age 65," Ms. VanCapel said.

"Read the daily newspaper, and find where the demand is greater than the supply," she said in explaining what to look for when choosing an investment.

Ms. VanCaspel said people should save 10 percent of their gross income and invest it. The money is never touched until they are financially independent.

"The secret of financial independence is not brains or luck," she said. "It is discipline — a saving of part of all you earn and putting it to work."

Officials announce G.E. exam deadline

Students who wish to receive a "pass" grade for G.E. classes which they are currently registered in have until March 23 to take the required G.E. examination, and complete and turn in the Pass Credit Form.

"Many students taking the tests are forgetting to take care of the paper work," Gene Priday, assistant registrar for the Records Office, said.

"Even if they pass the test, they cannot receive credit for it until they turn in the form. If they wait beyond the deadline to turn it in, their teacher is required to give them a letter grade for the classwork they have done," Priday said.

Priday said a "pass" grade has no impact on a student's GPA but the student still receives credit for taking the class.

Students who wish to challenge a G.E. test without being enrolled in the class must still turn in the Pass Credit Form, Priday said. These students may turn in the form anytime during the semester.

"However, if they want to get credit for the class, they must turn in the form the same semester they pass the examination," Priday reports.

Pass Credit Forms are available at the Records Office. After completion, the forms should be returned to that office.

Supports strong military

McKay calls for defense of freedom

Freedom is a relatively new commodity in the world and still desperately needs a good salesman, said Utah Congressman Gunn McKay Friday in the Varsity Theater.

McKay said freedom is a fragile thing that must be defended by each new generation. Americans too frequently take their freedom for granted and "refuse to apply our bill of rights to the rest of the world," he said.

He gave credit to President Carter for putting American ideals back into U.S. foreign policy. "All of us should support him in this and encourage him to refine and expand the idea of human rights as a basis for our foreign policy," McKay said.

"U.S. foreign policy based on human rights will relentlessly expose communist tyranny worldwide by the very standards which those societies now pretend to accept. It will be a case for the communists to 'put up or shut up,' " he said.

The congressman encouraged students to take part in what he termed "calls to action." He said the first is "to recognize ourselves as the good guys of history and translate American ideals into a working and aggressive foreign policy.

"America isn't indifferent about its identity — it is confused about its identity. I believe it's clear that individually, and as a nation, we do all too frequently take our freedoms for granted and needlessly divorce our Bill of Rights from our foreign policy," he said.

McKay's second call to action involved "backing our vision of human rights with a credible defense. We must recognize and adequately counter the increasingly belligerent military posture of the Soviet Union."

The congressman termed the reduction of U.S. defense spending in the last decade as "dramatic." The only area of military defense where the U.S. retains unquestioned superiority is in the air, according to McKay.

The strength of the nation rests in "our superior technology," he said. This technology which he described as "crowned jewels in our defense policy" keeps the U.S. ahead in the arms race, the congressman said.

"Looking back on our wartime history, we see that the United States has never been ready when war came, and we've relied in each case on a long acceleration lane to equip and mobilize ourselves after we've first been attacked. In modern warfare, we dare not fool with that kind of nonstrategy," he said.

McKay told a story of a visitor who found the "greatness of America" in its homes and churches. This moral strength, he said, is the true strength of America. The congressman said we have a responsibility to spread this moral strength. "If our only interest is strategic, we weaken the lamp of liberty."

Vietnamese refugee recalls 20-week ordeal

The slim girl with short black hair and a ready giggle appears to be just another teen-ager among the youngsters on this military base. But Tran Hue Hue sometimes seems distracted, and often wakes in the night trembling from an unknown fear.

She was the only one of 50 Vietnamese refugees to survive a 20-week nightmare after being washed ashore on a desolate patch of sand. She survived by wringing the necks of seagulls or crushing hermit crabs for food.

"She has not only gone hungry for more than four months, she watched 49 people die of hunger and disease," said her Filipino doctor, Col. Hugo B. Javier. "For a girl her age, watching one person die is traumatic enough. What more 49?"

United Nations refugee officials said Miss Tran's story began last September when she and 49 others fled Vietnam aboard a 35-foot fishing boat. After three days their ship ran aground on a remote deserted shoal off the southern Philippine island of Palawan.

Slowly, over 20 weeks, one by one, her companions died of hunger and thirst. In early February, 10 days after her last companion, a 14-year-old boy, died, a group of Filipino fishermen chanced upon the shoal. They cared for her on their two-week journey before taking her to their hometown.

She was airlifted here, to the headquarters of the Philippine armed forces western command, about 372 miles southwest of Manila. She has been undergoing treatment for malnutrition. In the past week, she's managed to win the heart of almost everyone on the base.

"Her hair was long and unkempt, full of lice. She was pale, but didn't appear too weak," said Jovita Abenoja, a medical technician on Javier's staff. "She was in a daze, her mind seemed to be someplace far away. Her skin was peeling, sunburned.

"Her first day here, she did nothing but lie or sit in her bed."

Javier, chief medical officer at the base, said Miss Tran "was apprehensive. Nobody could approach her. After repeatedly pointing to myself and saying 'Bac si, bac si,' Vietmanese for 'doctor' she finally let me examine her.

"I can only presume that reports saying she was in a very deplorable condition when she was found are correct. But it's amazing how fast she has recovered. She answered questions very intelligently, and best of all, she has a very good appetite now."

Miss Tran communicates through sign language because there is no interpreter on the base. One could be brought in from a nearby camp of 600 other Vietnamese "boat people," but officers said this cannot be done because they are under orders not to let the refugees talk with outsiders.

The physician said Miss Tran's emotional state is more troubling to him than her health. He said she often stops her sign language abruptly, her eyes staring blankly. She has told him she often wakes at night trembling, but does not know why.

Javier stresses that she has gone through an extraordinarily terrifying ordeal. "I've never got to ask her, but surely the thought must have crossed her mind, 'I will die.' "
